News Review Staff Take Stock As They Hold 69th Anniversary

No one knows whether early staff members of the Greenbelt News Review – then known as the Greenbelt Cooperator – held annual meetings, though residents at that time were so consistently engaged in going to meetings that an early city council established a one-time moratorium on the practice. If the paper's staff did hold annual meetings, the one attended here on October 29 would have been the 69th. In one more year the News Review will celebrate the beginning of its 7th decade of weekly publication.

Over time, of course, things have changed. In the early years publication was by means of a mimeograph machine. How many of our current readers could even describe that kind of office equipment? Later, when we moved to a linotype machine – a printing process now obsolete – it was an advancement. Now, of course, we use photo offset.

But back to this year's annual meeting.

This is when most members of the paper's sizable staff get together to share a meal; hear reports on the last year's achievements and problems; decide on changes in procedures, equipment and work assignments; and, finally, elect a group of fellow members to serve during the new year as the cooperative association's board of directors.

News Editor

One of the major topics under discussion at this year's meeting is how to accommodate Elaine Skolnik's desire to step down as news editor. For longer than most staff members can remember, she has functioned in that position. (She has been a staff member since 1955.) Following a serious illness last year and with diminishing energy, she would understandably like relief from her duties in assigning articles to other staff members and filling them in on the particular issues of a given story. She would like to spend her time instead at what she loves best – doing investigative reporting.

Members at the meeting agreed this is a reasonable request. A committee will be formed to break up assignments into specific beats with responsibilities divided among separate individuals.

Despite the many challenges she enumerated, Editor Mary Lou Williamson complimented the staff of volunteers for successfully producing, for another year, a quality weekly newspaper that has become the primary source of community information in Greenbelt. Business Manager Ron Wells reported that the paper was not only financially solvent but had been able to add a little to its reserves to cover future losses.

On the negative side, however, was the report of continuing late delivery of the paper from the current printer and having to deal with customers who promise payment for scheduled ads but fail to keep their promise.

As the last item of business, the staff holds an election of board members for the future year. At this year's meeting, all members of the previous board were re-elected by acclamation. Later, when the board met briefly, the same officers were reelected to their previous positions.

They are Eileen Farnham, president; Jim Giese, vice-president; Diane Oberg, treasurer and Tom White, secretary. Other members of the board are Virginia Beauchamp, Judy Bell and Pat Davis.

The board appoints the editor (Mary Lou Williamson), assistant editor (Barbara Likowski), news editor (Elaine Skolnik) and business manager (Ron Wells). Since board members have considered themselves fortunate that these staff members have performed so ably and for such long hours for the paper, they have been encouraged to keep their respective positions for as long as they are willing and able to do so.

Following a shared supper and an informative meeting, staff members enjoyed a pleasant evening of fellowship. As different staff members work at different jobs and on different days of the week, the annual meeting becomes the one time when all the paper's volunteers can freely interact.

A Challenging History

Since its inception in November 1937, the Greenbelt Cooperator/Greenbelt News Review has relied upon local citizens as volunteers to produce the paper. Depending on a small but reliable and supportive group of advertisers to pay production costs and the paper's free distribution throughout the city, the News Review has lived a pretty much hand-to-mouth existence. This has continued week in and week out for 69 years without ever missing an issue.

Occasional crises have occurred, however. Many decades ago the boards of directors of both the Co-op grocery and Greenbelt Homes, Inc., the cooperative that for many years provided free work space to this independent paper, became dissatisfied enough with what the paper reported that they made efforts to remove advertising.

At other times the lack of adequate funds stimulated fund drives which were successful. Sometimes other area weekly newspapers, better financed with advertising and with paid professional staffs, have offered competition. However, some of those papers are no longer around, while the News Review survives.

In the early 1950s, when five Greenbelters were suspended from the Navy Department as security risks, our paper was branded as "communist-like."

Greenbelt City Council Identifies Legislative Issues

by Thomas X. White

At its regular meeting on November 13, the Greenbelt City Council reviewed staff recommendations for priority legislative issues and advocacy during the 2007 legislative sessions of the Maryland General Assembly and the Prince George's County Council.

Following a shared supper and an informative meeting, staff members enjoyed a pleasant evening of fellowship. As different staff members work at different jobs and on different days of the week, the annual meeting becomes the one time when all the paper's volunteers can freely interact.

As is customary, Assistant City Manager David Moran presented the proposed legislative program in time to have the final program available for the legislative dinner meeting with Greenbelt's legislators on December 18.

The summary of legislative priorities provides a road map for city council and staff interactions with legislative representatives and other key elected officials. It also provides Greenbelt residents a useful guide to the items of special interest likely to come before the legislature in 2007.

State legislators for District 22, who were all recently reelected for new four year terms, are Senator Paul Pinsky of University Park, Delegate Anne Healey of Hyattsville, Delegate Tawanna Gaines of Berwyn Heights and Delegate Justin Ross of Greenbelt. Ingrid Turner of Bowie will represent Greenbelt on the Prince George's County Council.

Tom Dernoga was reelected to the county council for District 1 and, since his council district includes a small portion of Greenbelt West just east of the railroad tracks, Dernoga will also be invited to the city's legislative dinner.

State Issues

Greenbelt city staff recommended that council support three state legislative issues in 2007. First is to seek $500,000 in state bond funding to help with the city's efforts in renovating the Old Greenbelt Theatre.

Issue number two relates to funding for public safety. It seeks an increase for Greenbelt in the percentage of the police surcharge for municipalities with police departments. The request is for an increase to 50 percent, the same percentage that the City of Laurel now receives.

Also for public safety, the city

Morales and Crowley Feted As Appointed Board Exits

by Rivéa Ruff

It was a packed house in the grand ballroom at Martin's Crosswinds in Greenbelt on November 15. County officials, educators, students, friends and family gathered to honor and bid farewell to the appointed Prince George's County Board of Education. The Evening of Celebration highlighted their accomplishments.

The retiring members were honored with spoken addresses from Prince George's County officials, video documentaries from student journalists and television personalities and a musical performance from students and educators.

"Prince George's County Schools made great progress over the last four years," said John Deasy, CEO of Prince George's County Public Schools. "It is because of your leadership."

Part of that leadership came from two representatives from Greenbelt: José Morales and Abby Crowley. Morales and Crowley entered service on the school board knowing the challenge ahead. When they were appointed, the school system had a serious budget deficit, underqualified and underpaid teachers, low student achievement rates and no superintendent.

The previous school board had a poor public reputation and the system was in desperate need of change. "We were all brand new and we all had our own areas of expertise," said Crowley. "Anytime you bring nine people together with different backgrounds

Kind Words Needed

I was disappointed to read last week's obituaries column regarding Miles Johnson. I understand that the format is up to the editor, but to detail a police report and praise the Reverend's mission in someone's obituary? Of course she should be applauded but in that venue it didn't feel appropriate. Where were the kind words for Miles or his family? People make mistakes, bad choices and even get stuck sometimes, but the events of that night should not define Miles. Miles Johnson was a genuinely bright light. His laughter could inspire even the most negative of vibes. His profound insight gave him the ability to connect and befriend all different types of people. Easy going, thoughtful, respectful and generous in spirit, he was truly loved and will be missed by many of us here in Greenbelt.

The News Review series on American Education Week which focused on teacher profiles from Greenbelt schools will continue in the next issue.

Correction

The site of the December 5 workshop, "Marketing Your Nonprofit Arts Organization," will be the Greenbelt Community Center.

The final word in last week's obituary of Miles Johnson was inadvertently omitted. The sentence should have been: The investigation is continuing. The News Review regrets the omission.

Homework Issues? Listen to This

On Tuesday, December 5 at the Greenbelt Elementary School PTA's monthly meeting there will be a discussion of the role and utility of homework in children's education. PTA members and nonmembers alike are invited to learn about the county school system and Greenbelt Elementary School policies on the use of homework, to discuss some of the issues that homework raises for parents and to learn some of the arguments leveled against the use of homework as commonly practiced.

The meeting will be held at the school, 66 Ridge Road, in the Media Center. Approximately 45 minutes are planned for this topic. As always, the PTA provides child care on meeting nights.

Chromatics Holiday Concert December 9

The Chromatics return to the Greenbelt Arts Center on Saturday, December 9 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, December 10 at 2 p.m. with performances of their annual holiday concert. The Chromatics will present a lively mix of classic and humorous holiday tunes, inventive originals and a variety of covers, all performed without instruments (vocal percussion doesn't count). This year's concert, "got nog?", will include several new original tunes from the group.

The Chromatics (Padi Boyd, Deb Nixon [both from Greenbelt], Barry Mahaffey, John Meyer, Alan Smale and Karen Smale) regularly perform at public arts and science venues around the D.C. metro area. With day jobs in scientific and technical fields, they bring a distinctive edge to their original songs about the modern world, the Internet, TV, suburbia and the horrors of bad hair.

The Chromatics' nationally acclaimed AstroCappella project connects kids and teachers to astronomy through music. Their astronomically-correct tunes have delighted educators and museum goers across the country.

The Chromatics' 10th anniversary GAC concert will include guest a cappella groups from Greenbelt's Eleanor Roosevelt High School. Call the Greenbelt Arts Center box office at 301-441-8770 to reserve tickets.

Get the most enjoyment possible from this season. Come to the library to borrow books and videos about Christmas, Hanukkah, Kwanzaa, New Years Day and other holidays. Staff have organized displays about cooking, entertaining, decorating and relating to family and friends. There are also displays on holiday-themed fiction and many books about the winter season in the children's department.

The children's book discussion group "Bookids," especially for children 8 to 12 years, is in progress. It has moved to a new time: 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. on the second Wednesday of the month. The theme for this year is "Dogs for All Seasons." There is a dog in every story. This month the group will discuss "Henry Huggins" on December 13. New members are always welcome to participate in the program. The goal is to encourage children to have fun with books. The adult book discussion group will meet again on January 17 to discuss "Middlesex" by Jeffrey Eugenides.

Pilgrims Visit Local Elementary School

by ESOL Team
Springhill Lake Elementary

On Tuesday, November 21 Pilgrims were spotted at Springhill Lake Elementary School. Pamela Hickey and Virginia Cofie visited the ESOL (English as a Second Language) students and brought with them the authentic clothing of a Pilgrim woman and some other authentic items used by the Pilgrims.

Hickey and Cofie explained what each item of clothing was and why the Pilgrims wore it. Then one student from each ESOL group was selected and dressed to illustrate what a Pilgrim would have looked like.

Items used by the Pilgrims, such as wooden spoons, forks made from a bull's horn, flints, flax and wool were also shared with the students.

The demonstration ended with a tasting party, where the students tried some traditional Thanksgiving foods, including stuffing, cranberries, sweet potatoes and pumpkin pie. Great fun was had by all!

5th Grade English as a Second Language students celebrate the Pilgrims at Springhill Lake Elementary School with their teacher, Miss Cofie: Edgardo Bentiz, Sarah Reyes. At the table: Teresa Guerviero-Hernandez, Wendy Vieleda and Chrissie Hena.

Who is Allah?

"Allah" is the Arabic word for "God." The same God that Moses in Hebrew called "Alaha" and Jesus in Aramaic called "Aloha." The Arabic translation of the bible used the word "Allah" for God, The Father in heaven. In the Qur'an He describes Himself this way. "Say: He is God, the One and Only. God the Eternal, Absolute. He begetteth not, nor is He begotten. And there is none like unto Him."

—The Holy Quran 112:1-4

Patient Success Stories At Our Clinic

When I first came to Dr. Bezak, I had terrible lower back and leg pain. I was unable to stand up straight and could barely walk. So, I gave chiropractic a try and just after a few weeks of treatment, I was pain free. Now it has been six months and I haven't had the pain since. Thank you Dr. Bezak.

I came to Dr. Krol with severe migraine headaches that started years ago. I tried everything for my headaches, and was convinced that nobody could help me. I began therapy with Dr. Krol four weeks ago and have noticed significant improvement. Thanks Dr. Krol.

I came to Bezak Chiropractic with severe neck and shoulder pain. I could not turn my neck to drive. I was unable to work out or play sports. My friend told me to see a Chiropractor. I started treatment and noticed a difference after the first week. I followed Dr. Bezak's recommendations, and I am now pain free! Thank you so much.

Four months ago, I was in an automobile accident. After two weeks of waiting for my pain to subside, it had actually gotten worse. I consulted with Dr. Bezak and he educated me about my condition. I started treatment and almost immediately began feeling like myself again after a short period of time. Thanks Dr. Bezak.

is encouraged to support new funding for a joint municipal communications center to provide centralized radio communications and records management for the cities of Greenbelt, Hyattsville, Bladensburg, Riverdale Park and Mount Rainier.

The third recommended priority seeks legislation to prohibit gas stations which currently own a liquor license from transferring the license to another gas station or owner.

County Issues

Four county legislative issues are recommended for 2007. The first seeks annual county funding to reimburse Greenbelt for its school resource officer (SRO) costs. Through the efforts of Councilmember Douglas J.J. Peters, the city received SRO funds from the county for 2006, but was not assured that the funding would be renewed annually. Most other county schools enjoying the benefit of SRO programs do receive annual funding from the county.

County issue number 2 is perennial for Greenbelt. The city continues to seek an increased share of funding from the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) in the form of direct grants and program support. The city has long sought a more equitable allocation of M-NCPPC funding for its recreation programs.

The third county priority is continuing to seek funding for land acquisition and construction of a new Greenbelt fire station.

Another perennial issue is the fourth county priority, a hot topic during the recent primary and general elections. It seeks legislation to enable provisions enacted last year in the Maryland General Assembly (HB 654) allowing county councils to delegate to municipalities certain responsibilities for detailed site plan approval; certification, revocation and revision of nonconforming uses; minor changes to approved special exceptions and vacation of municipal right-of-way.

Additional Items

The legislative summary by Moran also includes topics labeled "Alert Items," "Other Issues of City Interest," "Items on the Maryland Municipal League

(MML) Legislative Program" and the "Legislative Program of the Prince George's County Municipal Association."

These include items of long-standing concern or interest to the City of Greenbelt. They are included in the annual legislative priorities document so that legislators and council members are aware of the city's continuing interest.

Alert items include continued or increased funding by the state and county for Greenbelt Cares and an update on development issues in Greenbelt West. Other issues presented by Moran include support for the Purple Line mass transit initiative, opposition to the Intercounty Connector and opposition to the extension/expansion of MD 201 (Kenilworth Avenue/Edmonston Road).

The city is also interested in a provision for municipalities to act as electricity aggregators, additional funding for noise barriers along the Beltway/I-95 in Greenbelt and full funding of the Thornton Commission education program. Other issues are creation of a MD container deposit program (Greenbelt REAC proposal), issues with the county's TheBus service and increased penalties for red light and speed camera violations.

Finally, the 2007 legislative priorities summary lists the four MML priority items for state legislation: increased aid for police protection, local government authorization to purchase street lights, building bridges with members of the Maryland General Assembly and municipal electricity opt-out aggregation.

Approval

Council agreed with the summary as presented and approved its adoption. Now staff will further develop the priority issues and other items, describing each in detail with appropriate background information. The materials will be assembled into a booklet for ready use at the planned legislative dinner and as a reference document for legislators during the coming year.

PETS

FOUND CAT NEEDS HOME – Aww, he's so cute.... I know you want to invite this handsome yellow-eyed grey cat into your life! He's such a glutton for affection, you can hardly keep him out of your lap! He's about 8-10 and very frisky. Nearly starved when he wandered in, $200 worth of tests were done that showed him to be in fine shape. Ecstatic to be indoors, this neutered male is unable to harm your furniture: he's been declawed. If you can offer a home to this deserving fellow, please call Linda at 301-982-7176 evenings. Otherwise, he must go to a shelter.

and expertise to tackle a problem like that, you know you'll face some challenges."

However, one of the points the outgoing board members were congratulated on was their ability to put their own differences aside to improve the schools. The exiting school board can boast a complete turnaround of the conditions of four years ago. During their tenure 13 new schools were opened, student achievement and test scores rose, staff salaries were increased and the large budget deficit became a surplus.

"They are wise people," said Wayne Curry, former county executive. "They understood the challenge before them and the importance of working together."

"I don't think any person knows how tough serving on the school board is," said William Phalen, president of the Maryland Association of Boards of Education.

Morales

Phalen particularly honored Morales, noting his enduring focus on the children. "I can't recall talking with him when not more than 10 minutes into any conversation he didn't say, 'It's not about me, it's not about us, it's about the kids,'" Phalen reported.

Morales applied to the school board out of concern for the direction of the school system. Having sent two children of his own through the Prince George's County school system, he wanted to be part of the solution.

Working full time for Thyssenkrupp Elevator Corp. and coaching a Greenbelt Little League baseball team in his spare time, Morales decided to dedicate his

The efforts of these men to clear their names became to some extent also the paper's effort. One of these men, Izzy Parker, had served as editor, reporter, critic and editorial cartoonist for the paper. Eventually he was cleared, as was Abe Chasanow.

The greatest challenge to the News Review occurred in the late 1960s when a developer sued the paper and its president, Al Skolnik, for libel and won in the courts of Maryland. Not only did the community come to the paper's defense, raising funds sufficient to pay the libel judgment, if it became necessary; but the Washington Post also provided assistance in helping us to secure legal counsel. The paper was at last vindicated by a unanimous judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States overturning the earlier Maryland court decisions and the News Review won its battle for freedom of the press.

Today's Challenges

While past challenges facing the paper were significant, today's seem perhaps even greater. These result from the rapidly changing technologies that affect how newspapers are produced and the changing nature of the paper's competition.

Consolidation of newspapers has reduced the availability of printing plants to print the paper and created limitations on formats available. Television news channels and internet news sources and blogs are harming newspapers throughout the country by taking away readership and advertising dollars. This is a potentially serious problem for a small independent paper such as ours.

In the past the printer set the final type, formatted the paper, printed it and assembled it. Now the printer expects everything to be electronic. Not being able to carry out these tasks ourselves, we contract out this work, tasks only a few individuals have been willing to take on. These are especially challenging since they must be done quickly, accurately and within a very limited time.

Volunteers

Volunteers come and volunteers go. When we begin to think everything is humming right along, someone moves away from Greenbelt or someone gets sick or other responsibilities intervene. In the early 1960s the News Review was fortunate in getting as volunteers some stay-at-home moms seeking an outlet for their writing and creative talents. They made the News Review their careers, becoming indispensable to the paper.

Several of these volunteers—Editor Mary Lou Williamson, News Editor Elaine Skolnik, Assistant Editor Barbara Likowski and Reporter/Senior Copy Editor Virginia Beauchamp have served well and faithfully for more than 40 years. They continue still to carry out their tasks.

But this community cannot rely upon their services forever. All four are doing more than they want to.

Newer volunteers have also come to hold key positions critical to the weekly publication of the paper. Their absence for whatever reason endangers our ability to publish.

Finding and training new volunteers to back up or replace these critical members of the staff is the greatest challenge this newspaper now faces.

In recent months the board of directors has been trying to provide backups for the responsibilities of these critical staff members. But to be successful we need new volunteers willing to devote time to the News Review. So far they have not been easy to find.

In the past 15 years the paper has converted from typewriters to networked computers with Wi-Fi, added a copy machine and a fax, learned to communicate over the internet and to produce copy ready for printing, once formatted. Cell phones and digital cameras have been other innovations. For many of the staff this has been a most daunting learning experience and we have had to rely on the assistance of others who know the latest in technology.

Last year we suffered a major loss with the death of Neil McLeod, who had helped us in many ways with technical matters regarding our computers. We have been fortunate now, however, to have a team of whiz techies, who wish to remain anonymous, who recently came to our rescue. They are bringing us many steps closer to being technologically up to date. We are grateful for their help.

The serious problems we face are of concern to all those involved with the paper who believe it to be an important part of the life of the community. Unfortunately the paper's staff and board can't spend a lot of time dealing with them. Each week we've got a paper to put out!

We ask you, our readers, is it important to you that Greenbelt has its own community newspaper, prepared and staffed by local residents and independent of any organization?

We hope that some folks out in the community who wish to assure the continuance of this vital independent source of local information will step forward to help in any way they can. We need to assure that so long as there is a Greenbelt, there will always be a News Review to report on who and what are important in our city.

spare personal time to assist in raising school board standards and improving schools.

"It's about making an environment that is conducive to learning for the children," he said. Morales listed his proudest moment on the school board as reducing class sizes in the elementary schools.

Crowley

Crowley was also highly involved in Greenbelt when she applied. An active volunteer in the community, her church and other outreach programs, Crowley saw the state of the schools and wanted to do something. An educator for 30 years, she saw this as another chance to serve the children of her community. "I saw this as a great opportunity to use my skills to help out," she said.

Crowley is proud of the school board's honesty and professionalism during their tenure. There were no large fallouts, scandals or backdoor deals while they were there. This made it easy to stay focused on the goal at hand. "In every decision I made, I put the children first," she said. "That is what I'm proudest of."

While both Crowley and Morales enjoyed service on the school board, both have opted to move on. Neither ran for election on the new school board. "I've never had political aspirations," said Crowley. "It was a pleasure to serve but I have no desire to engage in the political process."

Morales felt that he made sufficient enough progress on the school board to be able to pass on the torch. "I just thought I accomplished what I wanted during my tenure," he said.

Morales says now that his service is done, he plans to just relax and stay home spending quality time with his family. Crowley plans to tend to her family as well, caring for her two teenage daughters and elderly mother who recently moved to the area. She said she would also like to resume some of the volunteer work she had to put on hiatus while serving on the board.

Morales and Crowley will be honored once again in a formal proclamation on December 5 at the Greenbelt Municipal Building.
